TO THE
Nobility and Gentry of Great BRITAIN

That are desirous to speak French for their pleasure, and ornament;

AS ALSO

To all Marchant Adventurers as well English, as the worthy Company of Dutch here resident, or others to whom the said Language is necessary for commerce and Forren correspondence.

THEr is no quality so incident to all earthly things as corruption and change: Nor is it to be wondred at, considering that the Elements themselvs which are the principles and primitive Ingredients wherof they be compounded, are naturally so qualified: It were as easie a thing for the beholders eye to fix a firm shape upon a running cloud, or to cut out a garment that but for seven and twenty daies together might fit the Moon, who by privilege of her neighbourhood predominates more over us than any other celestiall body, as to find stability in any thing here below.

Nor is this common frailty or fatality rather incident only to the grosser sort of Elementary creatures, but Mankind upon whom it pleas'd the Almighty to imprint his owne Image, and make him Lord Paramount of this lower world, is subject to the same lubricity. Neither is his body and blood only liable therunto, but the Idæas of his mind, and interiour operations of his soul, Religion her self, with the notions of holines, and the formality of saving Faith not excepted, nay the very faculty of reason (as we find it true by late experience) is subject to the same instablenes.

But to come to our present purpose, among other privileges which are peculiar to mankind, as emanations flowing from the intellect, Language is none of the least, and languages have felt these fits of inconstancy and mutation as much as any thing else, and among others the French language. Nor can it seem strange to those who know the airie volatil humor of that Nation, that their speech should partake somewhat of the disposition of their spirit, but will rather wonder it hath receiv'd no oftner change, specially considering what outward causes did also concur therunto; As that their Kings should make six severall voyages to conquer or conserve what was got in the Holy Land, considering how long the English kept firm footing in the heart of France, as also the warres and weddings they had with their neighbours, which by the long sojourn of their

Armies in other Countries caus'd by the first, and the forren Courtiers that came in with their Queenes arising from the second, will introduce a frequent alteration. For Languages are like Lawes or Coines, which commonly receive some change at every sitt of Princes: Or as slow Rivers by insensible alluvions take in and let out the waters that feed them, yet are they said to have still the same beds; So Languages by a regardles kind of adoption of some new words, and manumission of old, doe often vary, yet the whole bulke of the same speech keeps entire.

Touching the ancient and true genuin Language of the Gaules, some would have it to be a dialect of the Dutch, others of the Greek, others of the British or Welsh; concerning this last opinion, there be some reasons to fortifie it, that are not to be easily slighted. The first is, that the ancient Gaules used to come frequently to be instructed here by the British Druyds, who were the Divines and Philosophers of those times, which they would not have done unles by muttuall communication they had understood one another in some vulgar language, for this was before the Latine or Greek tounge came this side the Alpes, or that any Books were written, and there are no meaner men than Tacitus and Cesar himself that record this. The second reason is, that there want not good Geographers who hold that this Island was tied to France at first, as Sicily was to Calabria, and Denmarke to Germany, by an Isthmos or neck of land twixt Dover and Bullen, for if one doe well observe the quality of the clifts on both shores, he will judge they were but one Homogeneous peece at first, and that they were slented and shiver'd asunder by some act of violence. The third is, that divers think before the Romanes conquered the Gaules, the country was called Wallia, which they named Gallia, turning W into G, as they did elsewhere; yet the Walloon keeps his radicall letter to this day. The fourth reason is, that there be divers old Gaulic words yet remaining in the French, which are pure Welsh, both for sense and pronunciation, as Havie a haven, is the same in Welsh, Derechef again, Putaine a whore, Airain brasse money, Prou an interjection of stopping, or driving a beast, and especially when one speaks in French any old word that cannot be understood, they say Il parle Barageoüin, which is to this day in plain Welsh white bread; Lastly, Pausanias sayeth that mark in the Celtic old tongue signifieth a horse, and it still signifieth so in Welsh.

But whether the British Greek or Dutch was the originall language of the Gaules, certaine it is that it was the Walloon, (I confine my selfe to Gallia Celtica,) which, when the Roman Eagle had fastened his tallons there, and planted twenty three Legions up and down the country, he did in tract of time untirly extinguish; It being the ordinary ambition of Rome, whersoever she prevail'd, to make the lance usher in her language (and laws) as marks of conquest; which nevertheles she could not doe in Spaine or this Island, because they had posts, and places of fastnes to retire unto, as Biscay, and Wales, where nature hath cast up those mountaines as propugnacles of defence, among which the very aboriginall languages of both Countries remain to this day. Now France being a passable, and pervious plain countrie, the Romans quickly diffus'd and rooted themselves in every part thereof: and so co-planted their language, which in a short revolution of time came to be called Romand. But when the Franconians, a peeple of Germany, came afterwards to invade and possess Gallia, both peeple and speech was called French ever after. Now, as all other things have their degrees of growth; so languages have the like before they attain a perfection. We find that the Latin her selfe in the time of the Saliens was but rude, afterwards under Ennius and Cato the Censor it was refinde in the twelve tables, but in Cæsar, Cicero, and Salust's daies, it came to the highest pitch of purenes and perfection, and so dainty were the Romanes of their language then, that they would not suffer any exotic word to be enfranchiz'd among them, or enter into any of their diplomatas and public instruments; The word Embleme having got into one, it was thrust out by an expres Edict of the Senat, but Monopolium with much adoe had leave to stay in, yet not without a large preface or apologie. A little after, the Latin tongue for the vulgarity thereof began to degenerat and decline very much, and out of her ruines sprang up the Italian, Spanish and French. The French language being set thus upon a Latin stock, (whereof she retains to this day some pure entire words, as animal, cadaver, tribunal, non, plus, qui, os, &c.) hath receiv'd since sundry alterations, or habitudes.

Chilperic one of the first race of Kings, commanded by public edict, that these greek letters φ χ θ ψ should be added to the French Alphabet, to make the language more masculin and strenuous, but after him 'twas not long observ'd.

Now,

Now, it is no worthles obſervation, that languages uſe to comply with the humor, and much diſplay the inclination of a people : the French is quick and ſpritefull, and ſo is his pronunciation ; the Spaniard is ſlow, and grave, ſo is his pronunciation ; for though the Spaniſh and French be branches of the Latin tree, yet the one may be cal'd Latin ſhortned, the other Latin drawn out in length ; as corpus, tempus, caput, &c. are monoſyllables in French, as corps, temps, cap or chef, whereas the Spaniard ſeemes rather to adde to them, as tiempo, cuerpo, cabeça. And indeed, of all other Nations, the Spaniard moſt of any affects long words, for he makes ſome thrice as long as they are in the French ; as of levement a riſing, he makes levantamiento, of penſée a thought, he makes penſamiento, of compliment, he makes complimiento ; beſides, the Spaniard doth uſe to pawſe ſo in his pronunciation, that the tongue ſeldom forerunns his wit, and his brain may very well raiſe and ſuperfæte a ſecond thought before the firſt be uttered ; yet, is not the French ſo haſty in his utterance as he ſeems to be, for his quicknes or volubility proceeds partly from that concatenation he uſeth among his ſyllables, by joyning the firſt ſyllable of the following word to the laſt of the precedent, ſo that ſometimes a whole ſentence is made in a manner but one word ; and he who will ſpeake the French roundly and well, muſt obſerve this rule.

The French language began firſt to poliſh, and to arrive to that delicacy that ſhe is now come unto, in the midſt of the reign of Philip de Valois ; Marot did ſomething under Francis the firſt, (which King was a reſtorer of learning in generall, as well as a refiner of language) but Ronſard did more under Henry the ſecond.

Since the reign of theſe Kings, there is little alteration in the context of ſpeech, but only in the choice of words, and ſoftnes of pronunciation proceeding from ſuch wanton ſpirits that began to miniardize and make the language more dainty or feminine.

But to ſhew what changes the French hath receiv'd from what it was, I will produce theſe few inſtances in verſe and proſe which I found in ſome ancient Authors ; the firſt ſhall be of a Gentlewoman that tranſlated Eſops Fables many hundred yeeres ſince, out of Engliſh into French, wherein ſhe concludes

Au finement de ceſt' Eſcrit
Qu'en Romans ay tourné, et dit,
Me nommeray par remembrance
Marie ay nom ſi ſuis de France
Per l'amour le comte Guillaume
Le plus vaillant de ce Reaulme
M'entremis de ce liure faire
Et de l'Anglois en Roman traire,
Iſops appelle l'on cil liure
Qu'on tranſlata, et fit eſcrire,
De Griu en latin le tourna,
Et li Roy Alvret qui l'ama,
Le tranſlata puis en Angloix,
Et je l'ay tourné en Françoiſ.

In the Roman de la Roſe

Quand la bouche toucha la moye,
Ce fut ce dont au cœur j'eus joye. and elſewhere
Sire juge donnez ſentence
Pour moy, car la pucelle eſt moye.

Two of the moſt approved ancienteſt Authors in French are Geoffroy de Villardovin, Marſhall of Champagne, and Hugues de Berſy, a Monke of Clugny, in the reign of Philip Auguſte, above 500 yeeres ſince, from theſe I will borrow the two enſuing examples, the firſt from the Marſhall upon a Croiſada given for a voyage to the Holy land.

Scachiez que mille cent quatre vingt & dixhuit ans apres l'incarnation de noſtre Seigneur Ieſus Chriſt, al temps Innocent 3. Apoſtoille de Rome, et Philppe Roy de France, et Richard Roy d'Angleterre et vn ſaint homme en France qui et nom Folque de Nuilly, cil Nuillez ſi eſt entre Laigny ſor Marne, et Paire, et il ere preſtre, et tenoit le paroichre de la ville; et cil Folque dont je vous dy, comença a parler de Diex par Frances, et par les autres terres, et entre noſtre ſire fit mains miracles parluy. Scachiez que la renommée de c'il ſaint homme alla tant qu'elle vint a l'Apoſtoille de Rome Innocent, et l'Apoſtoille enveya vn ſien Cardinal Maiſtre perron de chappes Croiſie, et manda par luy le pardon tel comme vous diray. Tout cil qui ſe croiſerent, et feroient le ſervice deu un an en l'oſt ſeroient quittes de tous le pechez qu'ils auroint faits; porce que cil pardon fuiſſy gran ſi ſen eſmecurent muls li cuers des gens, et muls s'en croiſſierent por ce le pardon ere ſi gran.

Hugues de Berſy who made the Guiot Bible ſo much ſpoken of in France begins thus.

Dou ſiecle puant et horrible
M'eſtuet commencer vne Bible,
Per poindre et per aiguillonner,
Et per bons exemples donner
Ce n'ert pas bible liſongere,
Mais ſins, et voire, et droituriere,
Mirouer ert a toutes gens.

If one would compare the Engliſh that was ſpoke 500 yeers agoe, with the preſent, he ſhould finde a greater alteration. But to know how much the Modern French differs from the ancient, let him read our common Law, which was held good French in William the Conquerers time. The warres and weddings tother ſide the Alpes, as I ſaid before, hath cauſed many Italian words to be naturaliz'd and become free Deniſons of France; as contraſte ſtrife, accort wiſe, garbe a faſhion, cavalier, centinelle, ambuſcade, attaquer, to ſet upon, Infanterie, camiſade, with divers others, which are all Italian words grafted upon French ſtocks.

I finde ther are ſome well-ſounding ſingle words diſus'd in the preſent French, which ſeem to be more ſignificant than thoſe that are come in their places, as maratre, paratre, fillatre, ſerourge, a mother in law, a father in law, a ſonne or daughter in law, a ſiſter in law; which now they expreſſe by two words, belle mere, beau pere, belle ſœur. Beſides I finde that ſome words in French are ſo abus'd, that they are turn'd to a counterſenſe; as we uſe the Dutch word crank in Engliſh to be well diſpos'd, wheras in the originall it ſignifieth to be ſick: So in French Cocu is taken for one whoſe wife is looſe in the hilts, and made him a paſſive cuckold; wheras clean contrary Cocu the Cuckow laies her eggs in another birds neaſt. This word Pleger is alſo taken to drink after one is drunk unto, wheras the firſt true uſe of the word was, that if the party drunk unto was not diſpos'd to drink himſelf, he would depute another to doe it for him, elſe the party who began would take it ill, which made Charlemain, as the record is yet to be ſeen, to inhibit his ſoldiers very ſtrictly to drink one to another; and in the abuſe of this word the Engliſh alſo is more faulty. Moreover this word Abry deriv'd from the Latin apricus, is taken in French (as alſo abrigo in Spaniſh) for a cloſe place or ſhelter, whereas in the originall it ſignifieth an open free ſunſhine. They tearm in French, a boon companion or merry greek, Roger bon temps, wheras the the originall is, rouge bon temps, ſerene and reddiſh fair weather. They uſe alſo in France when one hath made a good bargain, to ſay Il á joüe á boule vëue, wheras the originall is a bonne vëue. A beacon or watch tower is cal'd Beffroy, wheras the true word is l'Effroy. A travelling warrant is cal'd Paſſeport, wheras the true word is Paſſe par tout. When one is grown hoarſe they uſe to to ſay Il a veu le loup, hee hath ſeen the wolf, wheras that effect is wrought in one whom the wolf hath ſeen firſt, according to Plinie, and the Poet. —— Lupi illum videre priores.

Ther is one kind of ſaying or proverb which is obſervable, wherby France doth ſtill acknowledge her ſelf to be indebted to England, which is, when one hath payed all his creditors he uſeth to ſay j'ay payé tous mes Anglois, and in this and other phraſes Anglois is taken for Creancier a creditor, and I preſume it had its foundation from this, that when the French were bound by the Treaty in Bretigny to pay England ſo much for the ranſom of King Iohn then priſoner, the contribution lay ſo heavy upon them, that for many yeers they could not make up the ſumm; The occaſion might be ſeconded in Henry the 8 time, at the rendition of Bullen, and upon other treaties, as alſo in Queen Elizabeths reign (beſides thoſe monies ſhe had disburs'd her ſelf, to put the Crown on Henry the 4^ths^ head) which makes me think on a paſſage that is recorded in Paſquier that happend when the Duke of Anion under pretence of wooing the Queen came over to England, who being brought to her preſence, ſhe told him he had com in a good time to be hoſtage for the monies that France owd her father, and others of her progenitors, wherunto the Duke anſwered pleaſantly, That he was not come only to be hoſtage, but her cloſe priſoner. Ther be two other ſayings, or proverbs, that though they be obſolet, yet are they worthy the knowledg; the firſt is Il a perdu ſes cheveux, he hath loſt his hair, meaning his honour; for in the firſt race of Kings ther was a law call'd la loy de la chevelure, wherby it was lawfull for the nobleſſe only to wear long hair; and if any of them had committed ſom foule or ignoble act, they uſed to be condemn'd to have their hair cut off as a mark of ignominie, and it was as much as if he had been flourdeliz'd, viz. burnt in the back or hand, or branded in his face. The other proverb was, Il a quitté ſa ceinture, he hath given up his girdle, which intimated as much as if he had becom banquerout, or had all his eſtate forfeited. It being the ancient law of France, that when any upon ſom offence had that penalty of confiſcation inflicted upon him, he uſed before the tribunall of juſtice to give up his girdle, implying therby that the girdle held every thing that belong'd to a man's eſtate, as his budget of money and writings, the keys of his houſe, his ſword, dagger and gloves, &c. I will add her eunto another Proverb which had been quite loſt had not our Order of the Garter preſerv'd it, which is, Hony ſoit qui mal y penſe, we engliſh it, Ill be to him who thinks ill; though the true ſenſe be, let him be bray'd who thinks any ill, being a metaphor taken from a child that hath berayed his clouts, and in France ther's not one in a hundred who underſtands this word nowadayes.

Furthermore, I find in the French language that the ſame Fate hath attended ſom words, as uſually attend men, among whom we find ſome uſe to riſe to preferment, others to fal to decay, and an undervalue. I will inſtance in a few; This word Maiſtre, Maſter, was a word of high eſteem in former times among the French, and appliable to noblemen and others in ſome high office only, but now 'tis fallen from the Baron to the Boor, from the Count to the Cobler, or any other mean Artiſan, as Maiſtre Iean le ſauvetier, Mr. Iohn the Cobler, Maiſtre Iaquet le Cabaretier, Mr. Iammy the Taphouſe man. Sire, was alſo appropriate only to the King, but now adding a name after it, 'tis a title appliable to any meane man upon the endorſment of a letter or otherwiſe. But this word Souverain clean contrary hath rais'd it ſelf to that cumble of greatnes that it is now applied only to the King, wheras in times paſſd the preſident of any petty Court, any Baliffe or ſeneſhall, was call'd Souverain. Mareſhall likewiſe at firſt was the name of a Smith, Farrier, or one that dreſſed horſes, but it clim'd by degrees to that heighth, that the chiefeſt commanders of the gendarmery of France are come to be call'd Marſhalls, which about 100 yeares ſince were but two in all, and now they are 12. This title Majeſty hath no great antiquity in France, for it began but in Henry the ſeconds time; And indeed it was the ſtile of France at firſt, as well as any other countries, tutoyer, to thou any perſon one ſpake unto, but when the Common-wealth of Rome turnd to an Empire, and ſo much power came into one mans hand, then in regard he was able to conferre honour and offices, the Courtiers began to magnifie him, and ſpeak to him in the plurall number by you, and to deifie him with tranſcending titles, as wee read in Symmachus his Epiſtles to the Emperour Theodoſius, and to Valentinian, wherin his ſtile unto them is Veſtra æternitas, veſtrum numen, veſtra perennitas, veſtra clementia, ſo that you in the plurall number, with other titles and complements, ſeemes to have its firſt riſe with Monarchy, which deſcended afterwards by degrees upon particular men.

The French toung hath divers dialects, the Picard, that of Ierſey and Guernſay, appendixes once to the Duchy of Normandy, the Provenſall, the Gaſcon or ſpeech of Languedoc, which Scaliger would Etymologize from langue d'ouy, wheras it comes from langue de Got in regard the Goths and Saracens who, by their incurſions and long ſtay in Aquitain, firſt corrupted the ſpeech of that part of Gallia; The wallon is another dialect who is under the King of Spain; and they of Liege have alſo a dialect of the French, which among themſelves they call Romand to this day; There is another dialect alſo call'd Franco, which is much uſed in Greece and Turky, and is one of the chiefeſt ſpeech of comerce in ſom parts of the Levant, but it ſymbolizeth more with the Provenſall and Gaſcon than with the pure French, which is moſt uſed in theſe northweſt parts, eſpecially in England, wher beſides the main language, ther be ſo many French words crept in and naturalized among us, that one had need to ſtudy French to ſpeak good Engliſh. Nor can it be any diſparagement for the Engliſh thus to admit and enfranchiſe ſom forren words, as French and divers Italian for her ſervice, in regard that the language growes every day more copious and rich by this adoption of the choiſeſt and beſt ſignificant words.

Touching the modern French that is now ſpoken in the Kings Court, in the Courts of Parlement, and in the Univerſities of France, ther hath been lately a great competition which was the beſt; but by the learneſt and moſt indifferent perſons it was adjudgd that the ſtile of the Kings Court was the ſmootheſt and moſt elegant, becauſe the other two did ſmell the one of Pedantery, the other of wrangling and Chiquanery: And the late Prince of Conde with the Duke of Orleans that now is, were uſed to have a Cenſor in their Houſes, that if any of their family ſpoak any word that ſavourd of the Palace or the Schools hee ſhould incur an amercement.

Touching this enſuing Dictionary Maſter Cotgrave the Collector and Author therof hath as well deſerved in this kind of his Countrey as ever any did, for it is a moſt elaborat peece that coſt a great quantity of oyl and induſtry; he hath not onely the ſimple words as other ordinary dictionaries, but phraſes and proverbs upon them, with other obſervations: This commendation, as it is no flattery to give him, ſo 'twere an injury to deny him.

The former work is not awhit leſſend by this review, only ſom of thoſe words that are now abſolete, and held pedantic, forc'd or affected, are diſtinguiſhed by this mark † from others that have now the vogue in the refined Court French, which I would not preſume to do only of my ſelf without the coadjutorſhip of a noble and knowing French gentleman.

Ther was never yet any perfect Vocabulary or Nomenclator in any language; and though this may ſeem a Paradox to ſom, I ſay, ther never was, nor is ther any that can ſpeak a language ſo exactly, as to call every thing he meets withall by its name; put caſe the perfect'ſt linguiſt in the Engliſh now living ſhould go aboard a ſhip, then to a Carpenters ſhopp or ſom other artiſans, thence go abroad a hawking or hunting, then walk in a botomicall garden, I believe 'tis impoſſible for him to name all the tacklings of the firſt, all the tooles of the ſecond, all the terms of the third, and the names of all the flowers, fruits, and herbs he ſhall find in the laſt; and if he chance to go thence to any Apothecary ſhop, 'twill gravell him to name all the drugs and ſimples he finds there.

The late Cardinall of Richelieu made it part of his glory to advance Learning and the French Language (which may be ſom recompence for the ocean of bloud hee ſpilt.) Among other monuments he erected an Univerſity where the Sciences ſhould be read in French, for the eaſe of his contreymen, wherby they might preſently fall to the matter, and not ſpend time to ſtudy words only. Hee alſo had a privat place in Paris call'd L' Academie de beaux Eſprits where 40 of the choiſeſt wits of France uſed to meet every Munday to refine and garble the French language of all pedantic, and old words, as alſo of ſom ſuperfluous conſonants, and put ſuch another Dictionary to light as Cruſca in Italian; ther wanted not ſom inſtructions from thence towards this.

To conclude, If thoſe animadverſions and ſupplements which go with this new Edition may conduce to the public good, and to the advantage of thoſe gentle ſpirits who have a vertuous deſire to be vers'd in the refined Court-French now current, I have my wiſh, I have my reward.

Your moſt humble ſervit^r,

IAMES HOWELL.

The French Grammar.

The Proeme.

VVHat Foundations are to materiall fabriques, the ſame is Grammar to a language, If the Foundation be not well layed, 'twill be but a poor tottring ſuperſtructure; If grammaticall grounds go not before, ther is no language can be had in any perfection. The Schoolemen uſe to compare Logic to the fiſt, and Rhetoric to the palm of the hand (pugno et palmæ,) in regard the one hath a cloſe preſſing form of proceeding, the other a dilated and looſe open way of expreſſion; Grammar may be compared to the Feet or ſupporters, which the other two uſe to goe upon, and indeed all other Sciences, ſpecially the knowledg of Languages.

Now, for a Dictionary, which contains the whole bulk of a Language, to go before the Grammar, is to make the Building precede the Baſis: Therfore 'twas held more conſentaneous to reaſon and congruous to order, that the Grammar ſhould be put here in the firſt place, for Art obſerves the method of Nature, to make us creep before we go: Moreover the exemplifying words and ſentences in French are here Engliſh'd all along, for one will come with more facility to pronounce a word aright, when he carrieth the ſence of it along with him.

Of the French Letters.

TOuching the French Abcee, for Alphabet I will not call it according to the Vulgar error, that word being peculiar only to the Greek toung, it is to be obſerv'd that the Engliſh hath two letters, K, and W, more than the Erench, which conſiſts of 22 only. viz. A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, L, M, N, O, P, Q, R, S, T, V, X, Y, Z.

The Letters may be ſaid to be the prime and ſimple elements of all Languages; of letters are made ſyllables, of ſyllables words, of words ſentences, of ſentences Bookes and Volumes. Theſe letters divide themſelves into Vowels and Conſonants: The Vowels a, e, i, o, u, and y, are the principall ingredients of words, nay no Conſonant is pronounceable, or ſoundable without one of them, therefore tis fit they ſhould have priority of place.

A in the Engliſh toung, and in no other, hath two differing ſounds, the one open and cleere, as Balaam, the other preſſing and as it were halfe mouth'd and mincingly, as ſtale ale; In French tis alwaies pronounced as in the firſt, cleer and ouvert, as l'Amour fait la rage, mais l'Argent le mariage, Love makes rage, but money mariage.

To avoid gaping, which is the worſt kind of cacophony in any language, ther is t oftentimes interpos'd and added when a verb ends with a before theſe ſmall words, Il hee, elle ſhee, or on which is a note of an impersonal verb in French; as mon pere ſera il icy? will my father be here? before il you muſt put a t enclyticall wiſe, as mon pere ſera t'il icy? ma mere viendra elle auſſy? will my mother come alſo? you muſt pronounce ma mere viendra t'elle auſſy? que dira on de vous? what will be ſpoken of you? you muſt write que dira t'on de vous? ſometimes inſtead of t, l is put before on the impersonal note, as que ſera l'on a moy, ſi l'on faict ces choſes a vous? What will be done to me, if they do theſe things to you?

E hath two ſounds in French, the one full and ſtrong, therefore tis call'd é maſculin, and muſt be pronounc'd as the ee's in this Latin word coercere, to compell, with other verbs of the ſecond Conjugation, and commonly this é hath a tittle on the head of it, as degré a degree, pré a meadow. The other is call'd e feminin, becauſe 'tis pronounc'd careleſſy and ſoft, as theſe ee's in credere, to beleeve, with ſuch verbs of the third Conjugation; or as the ee's in this Engliſh example, John Donne, Anne Donne, undone: this French Proverb will ſhew both, Aujourd'huy en terre, demain enterré, to day on earth, to morrow under the earth, in terre, e is feminin, in enterré 'tis maſculin, and hath an acute ſound. And as after à an enclytical t' is interpos'd when a verb comes before il, elle, or on, ſo alſo when a verb ending with e, comes before any of theſe ſmall words, a t' is added to make the ſound full and ſtronger, as parle il bon François? doth he ſpeake good French? pronounce parle t' il. deſire elle ſortir? doth ſhe deſire to goe out? pronounce deſire t'elle--- tire on bon vin icy? do they draw good Wine here? pronounce tire t'on, ſo that among all the reſt T hath this privilege, to be pronounc'd when 'tis not written.

All Infinitive moods of the firſt Conjugation, as trer to draw, parler to ſpeak, have an é maſculin before the r; as alſo all words ending in ier, as Ramendier a Cobler, Cordonnier a Shoomaker, with divers other words of trade, & indeed all words ending with er are pronounc'd pointingly as danger, leger light, Bergér a Shepherd. E comming before m, or n, is of tentimes pronounc'd like a, as entendement underſtanding, muſt be pronounc'd as if it were written antandemant, enterrement a burialL, is pronounced anterremant. The third perſon plurall in verbs ending in ent, where the n is drown'd, are excepted; as prient they pray, arriuent they arrive, prierent they prayed, arriuerent they arriv'd; in theſe verbs e keeps her genuin ſound; as alſo in words ending in ien, as parle bien où parle rien, ſpeak well, or ſpeake nothing; as alſo in theſe words, muſicien, Pariſien, Chreſtien, mien, tien, ſien, a Muſician, a Pariſien, mine, thine, his; as for example, qui perd le ſien, perd le ſens, he that loſeth his own, loſeth his ſenſe, in ſien e retaines it's primitive pronunciation, in ſens it degenerates to a, as if it were written ſans; but theſe following words, though i go before en, muſt be excepted, Experience, patience, ſcience, inconvenience, audience, with theſe words client eſcient (earneſt) patient, ingredient, expedient, orient, fient dung, in all theſe en is pronounced like an.

I hath a peculiar ſound in the Engliſh, which differeth from all other Nations, for all other as well as the French pronounce I like ee, whereas the Engliſh pronounce it as if it were a Dipthong compos'd of ei. I at the beginning of a ſyllable before any other vowell degentrates to a Conſonant, and is commonly written long j, as jaloux jealous, jeudy thurſday, joly deſt or pretty, juge a judge; when it comes before ll, 'tis pronounced as if it came after them, to make the ll more fluid; as faillir to faile, muſt be pronounced as if it were written falliir, mouillir to wet, as moulliir, fille a maide, as filie; Except theſe words Ville et village, a towne and village, pupille a pupil, eſtoille a ſtarre, cauiller to cavill, mille a mile, all which are pronounced as they are written.

The Vowell O is not pronounced ſo round and open by the French, as it is by the Engliſh; when it comes before m or n, 'tis pronounc'd as if it were double, as pomme an apple, comment how, donner to give, broncher to ſtumble, are pronounced as if they were written poomme, coomment, doonner, brooncher; but thoſe words that are compounded with the Preposition pro, and deriv'd from the Latin, are excepted: as prononcer to pronounce, proceder to proceed, &c. Except alſo ſuch words that have Greek roots, as comete a comet, tome a tome, œconome a good houſe Governer, alſo dome a townehouſe, bonace a calme, domanie a demean, &c.

V as well as I hath the privilege to become conſonant, when it comes immediately before another Vowell, as it uſeth to have alſo in the Engliſh, as likewiſe when it comes before r, as fievre a feaver, orfevre a Goldſmith, vray true, which makes but one ſyllable, povre poore. The genuin pronunciation of v in French is as the Engliſh pronounce ew in crew, pew, Jew, or in a whiſtling tone, as wee pronounce flute, mute, &c. The German and Swed, with others, being a ſtrong winded people, and accuſtomed to rough colliſion of Conſonants, are ſubject oftentimes to turne v into f, as fotre for voſtre yours, falet for valet a boy. And the Germans are alſo ſubject to turne b into v, as I heard a tale of a Dutchman in Orleans, who thinking to complement with his Hoſteſſe who had divers children, told her, Par may foy Madame vous avez de veaux enfans, Madame, you have calves to your children, pronouncing veaux calves, for beaux faire.

Y In French though it be a letter, yet ſometimes it makes not onely a Syllable, as yvér winter, yvre drunken, but alſo a whole word of it ſelfe, viz. an Adverb relating to perſon and place, as mon frere y eſt, My brother is there, Dieu vous y ayde, God helpe you there, a complement uſed upon ſneezing. Though Y have ſtill the ſame pronunciation with I the Vowell, yet herein it differs, that Y is conſtant to it ſelfe and never degenerates into a Conſonant as I often doth.

Thus much of the Vowells, which may be call'd the ligaments or arteries teries which knit the consonants together. A and O have these privileges above the rest, in that a stands for a substantif, as Il est marqué a l'A, he is a principall honest man, ce monnoy porte l'A; this coine carrieth A, which is the best kind of coine bearing upon it the Parisian marke; O sometimes passeth for auec, as vien a moy, come with me, je dormiray o vous, I will sleep with you: but this is used among the vnder sort.

Of Dipthongs, or compounded Vowels.

Dipthongs are made meerly of Vowels, and the French tongue hath many of them, and some tripthongs, which are pronounc'd commonly as they are written, except these three, ai, ay, au; Aï is pronounc'd like an é masculin if a consonant follow it, as clair cleere, sain sound, faim hunger, are pronounc'd as clér, sén, sém; and so is ay likewise, but if a vowell immediatly follow, then they are pronounc'd as they are written, as rayon a sun beame, playe a wound, crayonner to paint roughly.

Moreover, in the first persons singular of the preterperfect tenses ai and ay are pronounced as written, as je parlay I speak, juray I sware, &c. pais a Countrey, hayr to hate, nait naturall, are not dipthongs but stretch'd to dissillables, as pa-is, ha-yr, na-if, which makes a mighty difference 'twixt paix peace, and pais a countrey, the first being pronounc'd pez, the other as before sayed pa-is. The dipthong au is prolated like a full o, as hautain highminded, is pronounc'd as hoten, chevaux horses, as chevose, chaud hot, as chode. The dipthong oi and oy are to be pronounc'd extensively as oe, as sans Roy, sans loy, without King, without law, pronunce them Roe, loe.

The dipthong ou is pronounc'd like oo, as ou allez vous? whither go you? must be pronounc'd oo allez voos; a la goute le Medecin ne voit goute, the goute makes a Physitian blind, pronounce as if it were goote.

So much of the Vowells (with their dipthongs) which are the same to a language as the five senses are to the body, in point of necessity; without these the body is but an unwieldy cackasse, without the vowels the whole bulke of consonants is a soundlesse thing.

The Spaniards use to vaunt, that their language hath a word that containes in it all the five vowels, which no other language can say of it selfe; it is Oueja a sheep, Jehova hath also all the vowels.

Of Consonants.

THe French is a hungry language, for it devours more consonants than any other, which makes his speaking & writing to differ so much as doth his singing and writing: I will not say his words and actions differ so much, though he be full of compliment.

Heretofore in the French Orthography ther were more letters written then now ther are, and I believe the reason was to shew the Originall and Etymology of their language from the latin, but now they begin to omit them more and more as superfluous, though in Province and Languedoc they be all pronounced and written. The reason why the French o're hips so many consonants is, to make the speech more easie & fluent, as vous me ferez croire que vessie sont lanternes, you will make me believe that bladders are lanterns: In this saying those letters which have pricks under them are all omitted. Now the most generall rule of consonants is, that if the word following begin with a consonant, and the precedent word end with one, that at the end is commonly cut off, to enchain as it were the words together, and make the pronuncidtion more smooth and round; and this contatenation of words makes the Frenchman seem to speak faster than he doth. Among others let this example serve, to shew how much the pen differs from the tongue, Il faict beau temps, 'tis faire weather, which is pronounc'd I fe bo tan, where halfe the letters are drown'd. cest' a l'hault goust, 'tis the highest tast, pronounce it ce'l ho goo. Nor is the English behind with the French in such contractions; as muskiditti, Godigodin, for much good may it doe unto you, God give you good evening.

Among Consonants some are call'd liquids, as l, m, n, r, and they are seldome cut off, as mon Dieu, mon Roy, my God, my King, cœur content, a contented heart; here n and r keepes her full sound; besides, c at the end of words keepes his sound, as allez avec Dieu, go with God, avec moy, with me, and sometimes this c in avec is wantonly turn'd to que, as aveque toy, aveque vous; f and g also at the end of words are not cut off, as le bon bœuf d'Angleterre, the good beefe of Englond, le joug de Christ est leger, Christ's yoake is easie.

B is pronounc'd as in English, and is alwaes cut off at the end of words, as palomb a ringdove, plomb lead, are pronounced palom, plomb.

C before e, i, y, sounds like ſ, as cecine Martlemas beef, ciprici-mi quickly; as also when it hath a taile, us ça, ça, courage, on, courage; ch is pronounced also like sh, as Charles Sharles, cheual a horse, sheval, except some proper names, as Chanaan, and these ʒ. Cholere choler, Chorde a chord, Eschole a schoole, Cichorée succory.

C before t is also cut off, as du dict au faict il y a vn gran traict, there's a huge distance twixt the word and the deed, in which saying every c is cut off; c in second is pronounced like g.

D preceding another consonant is seldome pronounc'd, save onely in these: admettre to admit, admirer to wonder, administrer to administer, adverbe an adverb, adversaire an adversary, with their derivatives, addresser to direct, Advent Advent, adroit fit and handsome; when a word ends with d, and the next begings with a vowell or h, the d is pronounced like t, as lourdabus a grosse abuse, galand homme a gallant man, vent au village rend vn homme sage, wind in the visage makes a man sage, in all these words the d is pronounced like t.

E in French is pronounc'd as in English, and at the ends of words it retains still its full sound, as bevez apres vn oeuf comm' apres vn bœuf, drink after an egge, as after an oxe.

G before e, i, y, hath a gentler and softer sound in French than in English, and is pronounc'd almost like an z, as genereux generous, giron the lappe, gyrouet a fane, in these g hath a melting soft pronunciation like z; when gn comes together the g is quite cut off, and the word is pronounc'd as if an i followed the n; as mignon a neat person, is pronounc'd minion; A la trogne cognoit-on l'yurogne, by ones snowt one knowes a drunken lout, we must say tronie, yuronie.

H is omitted in words that come from the Latin, as honeste honest, huile oyle, heure an houre, honneur honour, but in naturall French words, h retaines its aspiration, as hanter to haunt, haste hast, hardy stout, &c.

L comming before a single consonant is to be pronounced, alteſſe highnes, multitude, revolte, except fils a sonne, if it come before two consonants 'tis cut off, as tiltre a title, aultre another, &c.

In the end of these words, fol a foole, mol soft, col a neck, 't is pronounc'd like u, as fou, mou, cou.

M doth often degenerate into n, as nom a name, renom renown, faim hunger, temps time, Comte an Earl, in all these words the m is turn'd to n.

N is never pronounc'd in the third person plurall of verbs be they of what conjugation soever, as dansent they dance, parlent they speak, n is here eaten up.

P pronounc'd every where as in English.

Q retaines its sound at the end of words, as il faute du coq a l'asne, he leaps from the cock to the asse, a proverb us'd against them that digresse from their matter: que, qui, qus, and quo, are pronounc'd like ke, ki, ka and ko, as quarenta sortie, quiter to leave, question question, quottizer to taxe.

R. Some out of a lazie and soft feminin humor do leave off r at the end of words, as s'il vous roulez dormi chez nous vous me ferez gran plaisi, if you will sleep with us you will do me a great pleasure, but 'tis better pronounc'd than omitted.

S in words derived of the latin in sto, stis, stus, stris, is alwayes to be pronounc'd, as persister, contester, triste, illustre, except in prester to lend, where 'tis cut off, yet in prestation it keeps its sound; as also in vestiaire a vestry, though it be cut off in vestir to cloath, and in escarlatin, though it be cut off in Escarlate scarlet; and in Apostolique, though it be cut off in Apostre; it keeps its sound also in all proper names, as Auguste Augustin, except Escosse Scotland, Estienne Stephen, Hierosme Hierome, Crespin, in all these s is lost. S keeps its sounds in all words that signifie the fashion of a people, as a la Moresque, after the Moores manner; a la Turquesque, after the Turkes manner; a la Gregueſque, a la Barbaresque, after the Greeke and Barbary manner; as also in names of Sects, as Anabaptiste, Atheiste, Alchoraniste, Mahometiste, Sophiste; and lastly, in these ensuing words, most whereof have the latin for their Originall, which are rank'd according to the order of the letters.

T as in Engliſh before ion is is pronounc'd like c, as devotion, contention, and in the conjunction et, tis never pronounced, though the next begin with a vowell, as Moy et Antoine et Euſtace le moine ſoupons enſemble. I and Anthony and Euſtace the Fryer do ſup together.

X is pronounc'd in French as in Engliſh, but in theſe and all other numerall words tis pronounc'd like z, deux two, deuxieſme the ſecond, dix ten, dixieſme the tenth, ſix ſix, ſixieme the ſixth, yet in ſoixante ſixty, tis pronounc'd like s. In the ends of words x is pronounc'd like z, as paix peace, prix price, are pronounc'd paiz, priz, and as in this ſaying, aux faux jaloux deux yeux crevez, of him who is cauſelesly jealous pull out both his eyes; in all theſe words x is pronounc'd like z, yet in this word perplex perplex'd, x keeps her ſound, and in vexer to vex.

X hath this ſingularity above all other his fellowes, to have the ſound of two Conſonants, viz. c s, which being ſo, an ill favour'd Anagram might be made of vxor a wife, for orcus hell were a true Anagram to it.—Vxor et Orcus idem.

Z is pronounc'd as in Engliſh, as Il ne vaut pas vn zeſt, he is not worth the film of a kernell. It is to be obſerv'd that when z concludes a word, it makes the precedent vowell grave and long, as chantez ſing yee, dancez dance yee, and ſo all ſecond perſons plurall of verbs, celuy qui eſt adonné aux dez, le diable le tire par le nez, he who is given to dice, the devill leades him by the noſe. Obſerve that s doth very frequently degenerat into z, but z not into s.

THus much of the originall and ſimple materialls of the French language, viz. of the letters, of their pronunciation, and of the cutting off of Conſonants, but let it be ſpecially obſerv'd, that where a Conſonant is cut off, the precedent vowell muſt be pronounc'd with more gravity and longer, as maſtin a maſtif, wher the s is cut off, is pronounc'd longer than a in matin the morning, as alſo e in teſte the head, than e in tete a dugge.

This ſmall crooked Character ⁹, (which I have not read obſerv'd by any Grammarian) hath been in former times much uſed in the French Orthography, it uſeth to be put at the beginning of a word, and then it ſtands for con, as tout vñ a ⁹trepoil for contrepoil, all goes cleanly kam. Then it uſeth to be put at the end of a word, and ſtands for us, as Domin⁹ De⁹ me⁹, for Dominus Deus meus, like this Greek character ☉ which ſtands for omicron and ſigma, as θεός for θεος.

Of a Nowne.

Nowns are commonly joyned with Articles. { Le the, and vn a, are for the maſculine. / La and vne for the feminine. } Plur. les, the.

The French, as alſo the Italian and Spaniſh, with all other vulgar languages, have certaine prepoſitive articles which they put before their Nowns, which the Latine hath not, and they are le, and vn; they correſpond with our the and a in Engliſh; and they goe before Subſtantives, and Adjectives, as Le gran Turc, the gran Turk; theſe articles are moſt neceſſary to be known in all their caſes, as ſolloweth, and there are more errors committed by their miſapplication, than by any other way.

The declining of Nownes is made by Prepoſitions, the Accuſative caſe being alwaies like the Nominative, and the Ablative like the Genitive.

Theſe Articles ſerve
- In the ſingular unmber to the
  - Genitive caſe

5 Nownes in on, as affection, priſon, chanſon; except horizon, tiſon; and words endieg in ſion, as poiſſon.

6 Subſtantives in u, virtu, tribu; except feſtu.

7 Nownes in ix, as paix, voix, noix, poix, for pitch; except prix.

8 Theſe are alſo Feminines, mercy, loy, peau, ſoif, clef, nef, faim, mois, nonnain, putain, fin, façon, leçon, mer, toux, tour for a tower, otherwiſe not; brebis, perdris, iument, foreſt, dent, part, hart, mort, cour.

OBſerve that there is no Newter gender in the French toung, but the maſculine ſtands inſtead of it; when an Adjective is uſed for a Subſtantive, it hath alwaies le before it, as le long du bord de la riuiere, along the banks of the river; le peu de ſoin quel vous avez de moy, the ſmall care you have of me; Ie vous rendray le double, I will returne you double, &c.

Some words are of the Maſculine and Feminine gender, but then they change their ſenſe, as le page is a page, la page the ſide of a leafe; le manche is a handle, la manche a ſleeve; le tour a turn, la tour a tower; le voyle a veyle, la voyle a ſaile; le coche a coach, la coche a ſow, as voyla vne coche dans vn coche, behold a ſow in a coach; le haſte a ſpeare, la haſte haſt; le Satyre a wood God, la Satyre an invectiſ. Le poiſle a canopy, la poiſle a frying-pan; le periode the end or declining, la periode the end of a ſentence; le livre a book, la livre a pound; le temple a church, la temple the temple of the head; le trompette a trompetter, la trompette a trompet; enſeigne an Enſigne-bearer, maſc. enſeigne an Enſigne, fem.

Of Adjectives,

Gender. of nowns adjectives

ADjectives form the feminine gender, by putting to e feminine, as hault, haulte, high, caché, cachée, hid, except it end in e feminine, for then it is common to both genders, as homme or femme honorable, l'eau trouble, troubled water.

Exception.

1 ADjectives in c, turne c into ch, as ſec, dry, ſeche, except Grec, Grecque, Duc, Ducheſſe, Clerc, Clergeſſe.

2 Words in eau change eau into elle, as beau faire, belle, puceau a maide, pucelle, nouveau new, nouvelle.

3 Words in eux make the feminine in euſe, as piteux, piteuſe, Roux red, maketh rouſſe, faulx falſe, taulſe, doulx ſweet, doulce, frais freſh, fraiſche.

4 Words in t change t into v, as brief ſhort, brieve, reſtif tyr'd, reſtive, penſif thoughtfull, penſive.

5 Words in eur make the feminine in euſe, as flateur, flateuſe, menteur a lyer, menteuſe, iureur a ſwearer, iureuſe, pecheur a ſinner, maketh pechereſſe.

6 Theſe double their conſonant bas low, baſſe, bon good, bonne, net neat, nette, quel, quelle, tel, tell, bel, belle. Where note alſo, that bel is put before a vowell as bel homme, beau before a Conſonant, as beau garçon, a handſome boy. So nouveau is put before the Subſtantive, as le nouveau Teſtament, feminine nouvelle: but neuf, and the feminine neuve, after the Subſtantive; as In College neuf.

Touching the comparative and ſuperlative degrees of Adjectifs, in French they are expreſſed by plus more, and tres, placing them both before the poſitif, as plus ſage more wiſe, tres ſage moſt wiſe, plus vaillant more valiant, tres vaillant moſt valiant. But theſe following are excepted, bon good, meilleur better, mauvais bad, pire worſe, petit little, moindre leſſe; as alſo theſe Adverbs, bien well, mieux better, mal ill, pis worſe, peu a little, moins leſſe, beaucoup much, d'avantage more, par trop a great deal too much.

Ther be ſome Superlatifs form'd according to the Latine, as ſereniſsime moſt gracious, grandiſsime moſt mighty, reverendiſsime moſt reverend, illuſtriſsime moſt excellent, doctiſsime moſt learned; but they muſt be alwaies pronounc'd long, with the emphaſis upon the laſt ſillable ſaving one. There is another kind of phraſe us'd in French after the comparatif, which ſome hold not to be ſo elegant, as la France eſt plus fertile que non pas l'Eſpagne, France is more fertile than Spaine; Vous auez mieux parle maintenant, que vous ne fiſtes pas hier, you have ſpoke better now, than you did yeſterday. Bien alſo and fort are put before Adjectifs to make them ſuperlatifs, as Je ſuis voſtre bien affectione ſerviteur, or voſtre fort affectione, I am your affectionate ſervant.

Among all other nations the Engliſh put the Adjectif before the Subſtantif, which no other uſe to doe; yet in French there be ſome Adjectifs that are better before than behind, as bon good, beau faire, braue brave, as qui à bon voiſin à bon matin, He that hath a good neighbour hath a good morrow; beau chevalier a handſome knight, braue capitain a brave capitaine; as alſo all Adjectifs which imply honour or diſhonour, as c'eſt vn vaillant ſoldat, he is a valiant ſoldier, c'eſt vn honneſt gentilhomme, he is an honeſt gentleman, &c. but there be ſome Adjectifs which are never put before, as pain blanc white bread, pain bis brown bread, vin clairet clarett wine, vin rougé red wine; laſtly there be divers Adjectifs that may be placed indifferently before or behinde.

Of a Pronowne.

IE, tu, il, ilz, are put when the Verbe is expreſſed; as, je chante I ſing, tu iouës thou playeſt, il frappe he ſtrikes, ilz ont. But moy, toy, luy, eux, are put when the verbe is not expreſſed; as qui ha fait cecy? who hath done this? anſwere moy, not je; toy, not tu. Celuy that man, ceſtuy this man, iceluy the ſame man, plur. ceux and iceux, ſemin. celle and icelle, are thus placed in the ſentence: Celuy goeth before qui, and iceluy repeateth it as its relative, as celuy qui ſeme mauvaiſe ſemence, iceluy recueille mauvais grain, He that ſoweth ill ſeed, that man gathereth ill graine.

Meſme. Meſme is joyned to Nowns and Pronowns, and is as much as ſelf in Engliſh, or met in Latin, like egomet, ipſemet; as l'homme meſme, the ſelf ſame man; moy meſme, my ſelfe; luy meſme, himſelf.

Mon, ton, ſon. Theſe Poſſeſſives, mon, ton, ſon, noz, voz, are put when the Subſtantive is expreſſed; as mon livre, my book, noz livres, our bookes. But mien, tien, ſien, noſtres, voſtres, are put without the Subſtantive, having alwaies an Article joyned with them; as, à qui eſt ce livre? whoſe book is this? wee may either ſay, il eſt à moy, or elſe, c'eſt le mien, it is mine, les noſtres. Noz amis, et les voſtres, our friends and yours.

Of a Verb.

AS ther can be no ſyllable without a Vowell, no word without a ſyllable, no ſentence without words; ſo neither words nor ſentences can have ſenſe at leaſt any perfect ſenſe without a Verb, which may be ſaid to animat both, and this part of ſpeech ſwayeth moſt of any in the languages of men.

Ther are three ſorts of Verbs.

The firſt is Active, when the effect or product of the action ſignified by the Verb, paſſeth from the Agent to the Patient, which the Latins call tranſitive Verbs, as Nature fuit l'vuide, Nature abhorrs a vacuum; je craindray Dieu, I will feare God.

The ſecond is Reciprocall or reflected, when that which is meant by the Verb is not tranſfer'd to an other thing or perſon, but glanceth backe upon the Agent himſelfe, as Je me plais a la cavallerie, I love horſemanſhip; Il ſe delecte a apprendre François, He delights to learn French. This Verb hath ſometimes the ſenſe of a Verb Paſſive.

The third ſort is Newter, which muſt have the help of an auxiliary Verb, and herin doth not much differ from the reciprocall.

Ther are two Verbs to whom all the reſt are beholden, therfore are they call'd Auxiliaries, they are Avoir to have, and Eſtre to be: Avoir deſerves to have the van, becauſe he helps to conjugate alſo his fellow auxiliarie Verb Eſtre, and himſelf alſo in divers tenſes; thé difference twixt theſe two is, that the firſt is an Active Auxiliarie, the other a Paſſive: whoſoever is covetous of the French Language, one of his prime tasks muſt be to have theſe two verbs exactly by heart.

The firſt Auxiliarie Verb Avoir to have.

Concerning the forming of the Tenſes. The Imperfect of the Indicative is formed from the firſt perſon plurall of the Preſent, changing ons into oy, as chantons, je chantoy. The firſt and ſecond perſons plurall in the Preſent of the Optative, and in the Imperfect of all Moods, interpoſe i, in all Conjugations, as Aimions, aimaſſions, amerions.

The ſecond of the Imparative, is from the firſt of the Indicative of all Conjugations, as Di tu tell thou, reçoy tu receave thou, &c. The third from the third plurall of the ſame tenſe, by taking away nt, as ils donnent, qu'il donne, &c. Some be irregular, as qu'il face, qu'il ſache, from font, and ſçavent.

The Preſent of the Optative, from the third of the Imparative evermore. The Imperfect from the ſecond ſingular of the Aoriſt, tu leus, je leuſſe.

The Imperfect of the Subjunctive from the Future of the Indicative, by changing ay in oy, as j'yameray, j'aymeroy.

The Participle Preſent from the firſt plurall of the preſent of the Indicative, changing ons into ant, as baſtiſſons, baſtiſſant.

A Verb Paſſive.

Syntaxis of Nounes.

ADjectives, especially those that signifie colour, are put after their Substantives, as vin blanc, white wine, vin clairet, claret wine, pain bis, brown bread. These are set before the Substantives, bon, beau, belle; nouveau, nouvelle; mauvais, petit; as petit homme, mauvaise femme.

The Adjective agreeth with his Substantive in Gender; as mon pere my father, ma mere my mother. Yet if the Substantive begin with a vowell, they put an Adjective Masculine before it, as mon espée my sword, mon hostesse : Except m'amie, or if the word begin with h, when it is sounded with aspiration, as ma hauteur my height.

When two Substantives come together, the later is put in the Genitive case, L'argent du Prince est sujet à la pince, the Prince his money is subject to the pincer. Sometimes one of the Substantives is taken away by Elleipsis, as à la Sainct Iean, la Toussaincts, where the word Feste is understood.

Adjectives of desiring, or plenty or carefulnesse, and their contraries governe a genitive case, as riche d'argent rich in money, nonchalant de son prouffit carelesse of his profit.

Comparatives governe a Genitive case, as la face n'est plus grande de demy pied, the face is no bigger then halfe a foot. Sometimes que serveth to the Comparative, as plus blanc que neige whiter then snow.

Of Verbs.

THe Infinitive with an Article becometh a Noune Substantive, le boire estaint la soif drinking stancheth thirst, for le boisson drink.

When two Verbs come together, the later is the Infinitive Mood, as je veulx aimer I will love. Sometime the principall Verb is understood, as le mastins de courir, & nous d'aller apres. 1. commencerent, & nous commenceasmes.

The Nominative case goeth before the Verb. Except the question be asked, as iray je ? shall I go ? as-tu ? hast thou ?

The Accusative followeth the Verb, j'aime mon maistre : except me, te, se, le, luy, leur, nous, vous; as tu te prises thou dost value thy selfe, il se tourmente he torments himselfe, je luy diray I will tell him, je leur escriray I will write to them : except it be the Imperative Mood, as battez-le. Moy, toy, soy, are also put after the Imperative Mood, as well for the Dative as the Accusative, as di-moy tell me, leve-toy rise up.

Me, te, se, are put before the Participle en, especially before Verbs Neuters, signifying moving to a place, as je m'en vay, va t'en, fui t'en, ilz s'en sont allez. Sometimes a Verb hath two Pronounes before it, as vous vous courroucez fort, you anger your self much. one the Nominative, the other the Accusative case; or else the Verb is placed between them, as Comme vous portez vous ? Sometimes there are three, as vous vous en irez vous ?

Some Verbs being construed with an Infinitive Mood, cause it to be rendred Passively, as je vous feray batre, I will make you be beaten; faites faire chemin, cause roome to be made; je le vei mettre en prison, I saw him put in prison.

The

The Verb aller is elegantly construed with a Participle, as il s'en alloit disant, 1. il disoit; il s'en va mourant. 1. il meurt, he is a dying.

A Participle added to je suis, to make a Preterperfect tense, may vary both Gender and Number, as je suis venu; elle est venuë; nous sommes venus. But being added to j'ay, it changeth not its termination, as j'ay disné, elle ha disné, nous avons disné. Yea if a Substantive go before the Nominative case and the Verb, the Participle following is rendred Passively, and agreeth in Gender and Number with that Substantive, as les graces que Dieu nous ha données; les corps que la mer ha engloutis, the blessings which God hath given us, the bodies which the sea hath swallowed.

Of Adverbs.

NE the Negative is always accompanied with point, or pas; as il n'y est point, or pas, he is not there at all. And without either of these words it is equivalent to an affirmative, il est plus sçavant que ne sont ses compagnons, he is more learned then are his fellowes.

Dont is a Participle of Relation, and signifieth as much as de que, de quoy, du quel, desquels; as j'ay le livre dont vous parlez, I have the booke of which you speak.

Of Prepositions.

The Preposition à.

1 Standing between two Substantives, maketh the later an Adjective, as homme à cheval, a horseman; homme à pied, a foot man; escuelle à oreillons, a Porrenger, or a dish with eares.

2 Standing before a Denominative, it signifieth as much as after the fashion, as à la Francoise, after the French fashion; à la Todesque, after the Dutch fashion. So en is used, as vivre en beste, to live after the manner of a beast; traité en Prince, intertained like a Prince; Parler en Roy, to speak like a King

3 Is put after an Adjective signifying aptnesse, or nimblenesse, as viste à l'esteuf, nimble at the ball.

This Preposition à expresseth also the final cause for which a thing was made, as pot a vin a wine pot, vn estuy a peignes a comb-case, Terre a froment a wheat country. The difference twixt aux and es is this; es signifieth in the, viz. any thing one within another; aux signifieth any externall application, and is more generall.

The Prepositions de & du.

1 Standing before a Substantive, it signifieth either matter, as bague d'or, a gold ring; or the instrument, as batre de verges, to beat with rods; jouër de l'espinette, to play on the Virginalls.

2 It is put after Adjectives signifying dexterity, as habile de la plume, skilfull at his pen; habile du pied, active, or swift of foot.

3 Standing before the Infinitive Mood, it is Englished to, as je vous prie de faire cela, I beseech you to do that.

4 Du standing before a substantive signifyeth part of any thing, and is Englished some, as du pain, some bread; des poissons, some fishes.

De being to both Genders, is us'd in indefinit phrases, as authorité de Roy, the authority of a King; Telle est misere d'homme, such is mans misery, poissons de mer: And hereby the want of Adjectifs is supplied in French, in which point that toung is very penurious. Though Monsieur Madame, Madamoiselle, admit none but indefinit articles, which is to be imputed to the Pronouns mon and ma; yet these phrases are excepted; vous faites du monsieur, you play the monsieur; voyla vne frippone qui tranche de la dame, See how that baggage pranks it like a Lady.

Force taken for quantity endures no præposition after it, vous auez force ducats, you have abundance of crowns; j'ay force trauaux, I have good store of troubles; de is put also sometimes before the Adverb bien well, and becomes an Adjectif, as homme de bien an honest man, tres-homme de bien a most honest man.

Devant is construed with que before an Infinitive, as Devant qu'aller, before we go. Apres with the Preterperfect tense of the Infinitive mood, as apres avoir receu vos lettres, after the receiving of your letters.

Aupres, Arriere, à lentour, govern a Genitive case, as aupres du feu, neer the fire, arriere de nous, behind us; à l'entour de soy, round about himself.

STrangers are subject to commit errors oftentimes, in putting pour for, instead of de of, after some sort of words, as je vous remercie pour la courtoisie, I thanke you for the courtisie, whereat they should say de la courtoisie: So they use to say commonly, pour combien vendez vous ce cheval? For how much do you sell this horse? but this is neither good Latin nor good French, for acheter to buy, vendre to sell, loer to hire or let, marchander to trade, estimer and priser to value, &c. will have the thing, and the price of it in the Accusative case, without any præposition, as j'ay acheté ce cheval dix escus, I have bought this horse for ten crownes, Et je l'ay revendu a quinze, and I sold him again for fifteen. There is also another peculiar phrase of speaking in French, as combien faites vous ces gands, what sell you these gloves for; and so all other sorts of commodities: yet avoir to have, and bailler or donner to give, admit of pour or a, as j'ay acheté ce chapeau a six escus, or pour six escus, I have bought this hat for six crownes; j'ay baille vint escus pour ce cheval, I have given twenty crowns for this horse.

De is very frequently us'd in French for avec with, as Il en tuerâ dix de la chandelle, & quinze du chandelier, he will slay ten with the candle, and fifteen with the candlestick, a Proverb of a braggadochian; or Il est fourni d'entendement comm' vn oyson de creste, He is furnish'd with understanding as a goose is with a crest. This observation is of great consequence to him who will speak good French.

Of joy, gay, alaigrement, dehait, heigbday, merrily.

Of stopping, holà, prou.

Of En and Y, Pas and Point.

ONe of the greateſt criticiſmes and difficulteſt thing in the French Language, is to make right uſe of theſe ſmall Particles y and En, pas and point, thereſore I have reſerved them for the concluſion, and I ſhall in ſome meaſure endeavour to help the learner.

Y, is a Relative Particle coming near to the nature of the Dative, and en, to the Ablative caſe, both of them have ſometimes locall, ſometimes reall references; when y, relates to a place it commonly implies a going or removing thither, as vâ a l'eglise, go to church, j'y iray tantot I will go thither preſently. Y denotes ſometimes an abiding in a place, as Le Roy eſt-il a Londres? Is the King in London? Il y eſt, He is there, or Il n'y eſt pas, he is not there. Sometimes y ſignifieth paſſing by a place, as I'y paſſeray, I will paſſe that way: When y referres to a precedent thing, it ſignifieth an applying ones ſelf unto it or minding of it; as pren garde a mon cheval, look to my horſe, bien i'y prendra garde, well, I will look to him; Vous parlerez bien toſt bon François car vous y emploiez en bon eſcient, you will quickly ſpeak good French, for you ply it in good earneſt.

En, before a Verb is a Relatif, before other parts of ſpeech tis a Præpoſition; it referres alſo both to place and things like y, when it referrs to a place it denotes commonly a going out, therefore it hath a ſimilitude with the Ablative caſe, as Viens tu du palais doſt thou come from the palace? ouy, i'en vien, yes, I come thence. When en hath no certaine antecedent, it ſignifieth moving to a place; as je m'en vay, I am going away. When en hath reference to a thing it denotes ſome intereſt in it, as Nous ioüons a la boule en voulez vous eſtre? Wee are playing at Bowles will you make one?

En referres alſo to quantity, as Preſtez-moy de l'argent ſi vous en auez, lend me ſome money if you have any; J'en ay a voſtre ſervice, I have ſome at your ſervice; combien auez vous de laquays, how many footmen have you? I'en ay trop, I have too many. En hath reference alſo to the efficient cauſe of things, as Il eſt ſi amoureux de Marguerite qu'il en perd le ſens, He is ſo farre in love with Marget that he growes mad after her. En, referres alſo to materiall cauſes, as Je ramaſſe beaucoup de livres pour en faire vne Bibliotheque, I gather many books to make ther-of a Library.

Y and en are ſometimes us'd together, if a certain Antecedent be expreſſed before the Verb, as I'ay eſté a Londres & ie m'y en retourne, I have bin in London, and I return thither; Il â vne charge a la Cour & il s'y en vâ, He hath an Office at Court, and he goes thither.

The greateſt difference I find twixt theſe two little particles is, that y requires an Antecedent always to be expreſſed before: En needs it not ſometimes, as je m'en dors, I am falling aſleepe; beſide the one, as I ſaid before, hath ſimilitude with the Dative, the other with the Ablatif caſe; both of them cauſe an apoſtrophe to the precedent word if it end with a vowell. En is of a larger extent then y, for it ſignifieth ſometimes like or as, as parler en Philoſophe, to ſpeak like a Philoſopher, Marcher en capitain, to walke like a Captain.

I'as and point which are ſo frequently us'd in the French tounge, and ſo promiſcuouſly ſerve only to make the negation fuller. Point is us'd when we ſpeak of things having quantity, as Je n'ay point d'enfans, point de ducats, I have no children, no crownes; point alſo differs from pas, becauſe it ſerves ſometimes to make an abſolute anſwer of it ſelf which pas cannot do, as auez vous d'argent? have you any money? point, none at all; pas doth more aptly conclude a ſimple negation, or a negation of quality or place, as Il n'y eſt pas he is not there.

In conditionall ſentences we ſeldome uſe point or pas, as S'il vous n'eſtiez mon frere ie ne vous aimeroy tant, If you were not my brother, I would not love you ſo much. Beſides we uſe not point and pas in ſayings of advice and of taking heed, as gardez vous que le ſargeant ne vous attrappe, Take heed the Sergeant ore take you not.

Obſerve if there be any other word that makes the negation fuller, point, and pas are not us'd, ſuch as are rien nothing, jamais never, nul none, nullement not at all, onc or oncques ever, aucun any, quelconque whatſoever; as je ne vous doy rien, I owe you nothing, je ne vous vis iamais, I never ſaw you, &c. Moreover when we uſe ſcavoir for pouvoir to be able, or oſer to dare, daigner to vouchſafe; as je ne ſçaurois faire cela, I am not able to do that, je n'oſerois entreprendre telle choſe, I dare not undertake ſuch a thing.

So much of theſe Monoſyllables and pettie enforcing Particles, which keep ſuch a ſtirre in the French Language, inſomuch that I may compare them to the fly upon the coach wheele in dry weather, that ſaucily ſaid, Foh, what a deale of duſt do I raiſe?

A Dialogue twixt Sylvander and Cloriman, consisting of some extraordinary and difficult criticall Phrases which are meer Gallicismes, and pure Idiomes of the French toung.

Sylvandre.

O que je suis bien ayse de vous voir en si bon point,

O How glad am I to see you well.

Cloriman.

Ie vous sçay bon gré, mais, qu'estce que de moy, que vous en faites tant d'estat?

I thanke you kindly, but what am I that you should esteem mee so much?

Sylvandre.

Vous estes de mes amis les plus signalez & je m'aime fort en vostre compagne, & cela pour de bonnes raisons.

You are one of my most speciall friends, and I delight much in your compagnie, and that for good reason.

Cloriman.

Cela procede seulement de vostre bonne opinion en mon endroit, mais asseurez vous que vous me trouverez tousiours prest pour vous rendre le reciproque.

That proceeds meerly from your good opinion of mee, but assure your self that you shall find me alwayes ready to requite you with the like.

Sylvandre.

Ie vous baise les mains, mais, où est ce que vous tirez a'-steuré.

I kisse your hands, but whither are you going now?

Cloriman.

Ie vay faire vn tour de pourmenade, pour ne desenüyer.

I go to walk a turn to recreate my self.

Sylvandre.

I'iray quand & vous, y â il quelqu'un au jardin?

I'le go along with you, is ther any body in the garden?

Cloriman.

Personne, je m'y trouveray tout a'steure.

Not any body, I'le be there presently.

Sylvandre.

Tout beau, qu'apprenez vous de nouvelles de vos parens aux champs.

Go soft, what newes have you from your friends in the Country?

Cloriman.

On m'a escrit que mon frere â passé le pas, & qu'il mourut en vray Chrestien.

They have writ to me that my brother is dead, and that hee died a true Christian.

Sylvandre.

Las, que c'est peu de chose de nous quand il plait a Dieu, las que nous sommes miserables; mais son trespas me tasche pour nous avoir quitté en la fleur de son aage.

Helas, what poor things are we when it pleaseth God, helas how miserable are we? but his death troubleth me, because he left us in the flower of his youth.

Cloriman.

Pour le mesme suject j'en ay beaucoup de regret, & pour d'autres raisons.

For the same cause I am also much aggriev'd, and for other reasons,

Sylvandre.

Si j'eſtois que de vous j'iroye quand & quand pour conſoler, madame votre mere, car il y va de voſtre devoir.

I were I as you, I would preſently go to comfort the gentlewoman your mother, for your duty cals you to it.

Cloriman.

Si ferai je, Il y va auſſy de mon intereſt; car on m'a dit qu'elle s'en va mourant de triſteſſe.

So I will, and my intereſt lies alſo therein, for I am told that ſhe is likewiſe a dying of griefe.

Sylvandre.

Haſtez vous y donc, et en votre abſence s'il y a choſe pour petite qu'elle ſoit qui vous puiſſe importer, de grace, ſervez vous de moy.

Haſt thither then, and in your abſence if ther be any thing, be it never ſo little, that may concern you, I pray make uſe of me.

Cloriman.

I'avois depuis peu vn procez, mais graces a Dieu j'y ay reuſſy, de ſorte que je n'ay gueres a faire a Paris.

I had lately a ſuit in law, but thanks be to God I brought it to a good end, ſo that I have little to do now in Paris.

Sylvandre.

Vous eſtes, plus heureux que je ne ſuis, car j'y ay vn procez de plus de trois ans? Si eſt ceque le Juge au gros ventre ne le veut pas vuider.

You are more happie then, for I have a ſuit three years old and more, yet the Judge with the great belly will not make an end of it.

Cloriman.

Il faut que vous ayez patience; tout vient a point qui peut attendre.

You muſt have patience, all comes right to him that hath patience.

Sylvandre.

Vous parlez en philoſophe, me ſeauriez vous dire le quantieme de ce mois avons nous aujourdhuy.

You ſpeak like a Philoſopher, can you tell me what day of the month this is.

Cloriman.

C'eſt ſe huictieme de Septembre, & environ la Saint Michel j'eſpere etre de retour, mais voy lá venir Philippe, dont je ſuis bien aiſe.

'Tis the eight of September, and about Michaelmas I hope to be return'd, but there comes Philip for which I am very glad.

Sylvandre.

C'eſt mon; & bien, d'ou venez uous? s'il vous plaiſt, d'ou vient il que Paris vous a manqué ſi long tems?

'Tis he; well, whence come you Sir, may it pleaſe you? what's the reaſon you have been ſo long abſent from Paris?

Philippe.

Ie vien de faire le tour de toute la France.

I come from travayling all France.

Sylvandre.

Ma foy, il faut que vous ayez force ducats de faire ſi longs voyages, il faut que vous ayez bien dequoy.

Faith, you muſt have crowns enough to make ſuch long journeyes, you muſt have good meanes.

Philippe.

Quoy que je n'aye gueres vaillant, ſi eſtce que je n'euſſe pas voulu pour trois fois autant que j'ay eſpendu, que je n'euſſe pas fait ce voyage, j'ay veu tant de choſes remarquables.

Although I am not very rich, yet I would not for thrice as much as I ſpent but I had made this journey, I have ſeen ſo many remarquable things.

Sylvandre.

Et bien qu'eſt ce que vous auez veu de plus ſignalé?

well, and what have you ſeen moſt remarquable?

Philippe.

Vrayement c'eſt vn beau païs que la France, ce ſeroit vn diſcours infiny de vous dire tout, mais entre autres choſes j'ay veu toutes les plus belles villes du Roy aume, & j'ay obſerve qu'elles ſont toutes poſées ſur des grandes & navigables rivieres; comme les villes de Rouën & Paris ſont ſitures ſur la ſeine,

Truly France is a brave Countrey, it were an infinit diſcours to tell you all, but among other things I ſaw all the faireſt townes of France, and I have obſerv'd that they are ſituated upon great and navigable Rivers; as the Townes of Rouen and Paris are placed upon the River Scine, thoſe of Bourdeaux and celles de Bourdeaux & Tholouſé ſur, la Garomne, celle de Lion, auec d'autres, ſur deux rivieres c'eſt á ſcavoir la Rohne & la Saulne, celles d'Amiens & Abbeville ſur la Some, celles d'Orleans, Blois, Tours, Saumur & Nantes ſur la Loire. I'ay veu auſſy tous les Cours de Parlements, comme Troyes en Champagne, Dijon en Burgogne, Aix en Provence, Grenoble en Dauphiné, Renes en Bretagne, Bourdeaux en Gaſcogne, Rouen en Normandie, & Paris pour l'Iſle de France, pour la Picardie, & tous le pays juſques a Lion.

Tholouſe upon the Garomnd, that of Lion, with others, upon two rivers (whereof the one is ſlow the other ſwift) the Rohne and the Saulne, thoſe of Amiens and Abbeville upon the Some, thoſe of Orleans, Blois, Tours, Saumur, Nantes and a multitude of others upon the Loire.
I have ſeen likewiſe all the Courts of Parliament, as Troyes in Champany, Dijon in Burgundy, Aix in Province, Grenoble in Dauphine, Renes in Britany, Bourdeaux in Gaſcony, Rouen in Normandy, and Paris for the Iſle of France, Picardy, and all the Countrey as farre as Lions.

Sylvandre.

Vraiement c'eſt bien voyagé, mais où eſtce que vous vous acheminez maintenant?

Truly you have travelld well, but whither are you bound now?

Philippe.

Ie vay a la Cour, pour rendre mes devoirs au Roy mon maiſtre, eſt il long temps que vous l'avez veu?

I go to Court to do my duty to the King my maſter, is it long ſince you ſaw him?

Sylvandre.

Il n'ya gueres, & je vous aſſeure c'eſt le plus adroit Prince, & le plus puiſſant pour ſon aage que la France a eu jamais.

'Tis but lately, and I aſſeure you he is the properſt Prince, and the goodlieſt of his age that ever France had.

Philippe.

Monſieur, voicy l'heure qui m'appelle au depart, c'eſt pourquoy je m'en vay prendre congé de vous.

Sir, you ſee the time bids me depart, therfore I will take my leave of you.

Sylvandre.

Monſieur, Je vous remercie bien fort, & vous ſupplie d'une choſe, c'eſt que nous nous puiſſions revoir deux Jours d'icy.

Sir, I very much thank you, and deſire one thing of you, that we may ſee one another again two dayes hence.

Philippe.

Monſieur, toutes & quantes fois qu'il vous plaira me faire tant de bien.

Sir, as often as you ſhall pleaſe to do me ſo much favor.

Sylvandre.

Puis que vous y allez, obligez moy de preſenter mes baiſemains a tous nos amis a la Cour.

Since you are going thither, I pray preſent my ſervice to all our friends at Court.

Philippe.

Si feray-je, ne paſſez pas donc plus outre, car vous eſtes trop ceremonieux, & vous ſcavez que la loy ceremonielle eſt abrogée long tems y á.

I ſhall do it, go no further then, for you are too ceremonious, and you know that the ceremoniall law is abrogated long ſince.

Sylvandre.

Monſieur, pour moy j'amerois mieux eſtre trop ceremonieux, que trop prophane; Adieu, en vous remerciant.

Sir, for my part, I had rather be too ceremonious, than too prophane; farewell, I thank you.

Obſervé, That in ſo ſhort a Dialog, which relates meerly to ſome peculiar phraſes, and modes of ſpeaking that are proper only to the French language, and not rendible verbatim, in any other, ther could not have been expected ſuch choice and ſubſtantiall matter as might have been couch'd in a looſe and free Diſcours.

Obſerve

OBserve that one of the main tasks of the late Academy of wits in Paris, is to retrench the ſuperfluous letters, whereof the French Language is fuller than any other; as will appeer in this following example.

L'Apoſtre Saint Paul en ſes Epiſtres nous advertit, que le droict chemin pour parfaictement cognoiſtre noſtre Souverain ſeigneur eſt de nous accouſtumer a bien faire, & d'eſcouter la tres-ſaincte Eſcriture, qui nous rend treſmoignage de luy, et de frequenter l'Egliſe ſon eſpouſe, la quelle nous fera paroiſtre les eſmerveillables effects de l'amour qu'il nous monſtre chaſque moment; Elle nous eſclairira auſſy en la cognoiſſance de noſtre Redempteur, et nous fera deſdaigner le monde auec vn vray deſgouſt, et meſpriſer nous meſmes et les esbats de ceſte vie, auec vn gran deſplaiſir et meſcontentement, et nous fera appreſter pour le temps de noſtre treſpas, en nous rempliſſant de doux ſouſpirs. Les eſprits ſubtils et deſliez qui ayment qlutoſt l'eſcole de la nature, peut eſtre, ne ſe ſoucieront gueres de ceſt' advis qui touche l'eſ' at de leur ames auquel il n'y â rien d'eſgal, &c.

According to the refined French you write thus.

L'Apotre St. Paul en ſes Epitres nous avertit que le droit chemin pour parfaitement conoitre notre ſoverain ſeigr. eſt de nous accoutumer a bien faire, et d'ecouter la treſainte Eſcriture qui nous rend temoignage de luy, et de frequenter L'Egliſe ſon Eſpouſe, la quelle nous fera paroitre les emerveillables effets de l'amour qu'il nous montre chaque moment; Elle nour eclairira auſſy en la conoiſſance de notre Redemteur, et nous fera dedaigner le monde auec vn vray degout, et mepriſer nous mémes et les ebas de cette vie auec vn gran deplaiſir et mecontentément, nous fayſant appreter pour le tems de notre trepas en nous rempliſſant de doux ſoupirs. Les eſpris ſutils et deliez qui ayment plutot l'ecole de la nature, peut etre, ne ſe ſoucieront gueres de cet' auis, qui touche l'etat de leur ames, auquel il n'y â rien d'egal, &c.

Engliſhed thus.

The Apoſtle Saint Paul in his Epiſtles, doth advertiſe us that the right way to know perfectly our Soverain Lord is to accuſtom our ſelvs to do well, and to hear the holy Scripture which gives teſtimony of him, and to frequent the Church his Spouſe, who will make appear unto us the marveilous effects of the love he ſhowes us every moment; ſhe will alſo enlighten us in the knowledg of our Redeemer, and make us diſdain the world with a tru diſtaſt, and deſpiſe our ſelvs, and the ſports of this life with a great diſpleaſure and diſcontentment, and make us prepare our ſelvs for the time of our death, by filling us with ſweet ſighings. The ſubtil and nimble ſpirits that love rather the ſchool of Nature, will not peradventure care much for this counſell, that concerns the ſtate of their ſouls, which nothing can equall, &c.

In the ſecond French example, you may obſerve by collating it with the firſt, ſundry Conſonants cut off, which the late Refiners of the French Language do allow of; as alſo any other letter that is us'd to be written and not pronounc'd, eſpecially if the word be derived from the Latin, may be omitted, according to the rules of the Modern Orthography.

Thus haue you the Rudiments and chief fundamentalls of the French Toung, which may fit you for the following Dictionary, and afterwards as you make a further progreſſe in the Language, you may conſult longer Grammars wherof ther are divers, among whom I hold Maupus to be the exacteſt and moſt Schollar like, where you ſhall find things illuſtrated, and exemplified more at large; yet there are no precepts ſo punctuall, but much muſt be left to Obſervation, which is the gran Miſtreſſe that guides and improves the underſtanding in the reſerch and pourſute of all humane knowledg.

Quod deficit in præcepto, ſuppleat Obſervatio.

To

and my very good Lord and Maſter, Sir William Cecil Knight, Lord Burghley, and ſonne and heire apparent unto the Earle of Exceter.

THere preſent unto your Lordſhips view an Account of the expence of many houres, which in your ſervice, and to mine own benefit might have been otherwiſe imployed: for ſloth, howſoever, had not conſumed them; ſomewhat I muſt have done the whileſt; nor could I have beſtowed them on a work of leſſe uſe for your Lordſhip, the French being already ſo well underſtood by you, and all yours. In which regard, as I am particularly bound to acknowledg your Lordſhips goodneſſe, bearing with my humor to follow, and allowing me time to finiſh, it; ſo have all they, to whom it ſhall prove of any worth, juſt cauſe to honour in your Lordſhip that goodneſſe, continued a long time unto their, and the common good. No privat conſideration was fit to make your Lordſhip often to diſpence with th ordinary attendance of an ordinary ſervant. But this is one of the leaſt of your Lordſhips reſpects to the Public; and I would be loath to ingage your Judgement, or Honour, on the ſucceſſe of ſo mean a Peece. My deſires have aimed at more ſubſtantiall marks; but mine eyes failed them, and forced me to ſpend out much of their vigour on this Bundle of words; which though it may be unworthy of your Lordſhips great patience, and perhaps ill ſorted to the expectation of others, yet is it the beſt I can at this time make it, and were, how perfect ſoever, no more then due to your Lordſhip, to whom I owe, for what I have been many yeers, whatſoever I am now, or look to be hereafter.

Your Lordſhips

moſt bounden ſervant

Randle Cotgrave.

Au favorable Lecteur François.

 ECteur, l'Auteur de ce livre (Gentilhomme Anglois, à qui ſon propre Pays &, ſur tout, le notre ont vne obligation particuliere, qu'ilz ont à peu d'autres) apres avoir peniblement veillé & travaillé par pluſieurs ans, ſur cet œuvre, non moins, certes, ingrat que laborieuz; En fin eſt contraint de le laiſſer partir de ſes mains, plutot vaincu de l'importunité de ſes Amis, & de la neceſſité que le public en à, que ſatisfait en ſon ame de ſon propre ouvrage. Et t'aſſure que ſi on l'eut voulu croire, il fût encore apres à ſe tourmenter, pour trouver la ſignification de telz mots, qui, poſſible, ne ſeront jamais plus ouyz en ce monde, (quoy que luz) & dont, je croy, il n'y a perſonne qui ait ouy parler depuis cent ans, que luy; tant ſa curioſité a eté grande & exacte à lire toute ſorte de livres, vieuz & nouveauz, & de tous noz dialectes. A cette cauſe, peur, poſſible, qu'ayant égard à ce que tu voys, non à ce que tu ne voys pas, tu l'accuſes plutot de ce qu'il a dit, que de ce qu'il a eté contraint de laiſſer; qui toutefois ſeroit vn treſor ineſtimable, s'il eût pu trouver, ou pardeça, ou en France meſmes (où il a eté ſi curieuz d'envoyer expres) qui l'eut pu, ou voulu reſoudre de ſes doutes; Il te ſuplie bien fort, ſi tu trouves icy quelques mots qui te ſonnent mal auz oreilles, ou meſme qui n'y ayent encore jamais ſonné, de croire, qu'ilz ne ſont point de ſon invention, mais recueilliz de la multitude & diverſité de noz Auteurs, que poſſible tu n'auras pas encore luz, & qui, tant bons que mauvais, deſirent tous d'eſtre entenduz. Il pouvoit bien citer le nom, le livre, la page, & le paſſage; mais ce n'eut plus icy eté vn Dictionaire, ains vn Labirinte. Ceuz qui ne les ſauront, pas, les aprendront; Ceuz qui les ſauront, jugeront bien que l'ignorance, poſſible, d'vn ſeul mot, ſoit ſubſtanciel, metaforique, inuſité, ou tiré de la varieté des Ars, peut ſouvent obſcurcir tout vn ſens, & rendre barbares les conceptions les plus gentilles. Permis à qui voudra d'en vſer, ou de les laiſſer; Bien entendu, toutefois, que ce ne ſeroit pas le pis qui nous pût arriver, que de remettre ſuz, certains mots ſur-annez, que nous avons mieuz aimé laiſſer perdre, quoy que tres propres & ſignificatifs; Et autres de notre propre cru, bien que de divers terroir, allans plutot mandier chez les Etrangers pour nous exprimer, ou bien nous taiſans du tout, ou parlans par vn long contournement de paroles, que d'ouvrir vn peu la bouche pour en prononcer quelques vns qui ſembloyent trop reveſches pour la douceur du palais de noz Damoiſelles, ou grater l'oreille delicate de Meſſieurs noz Courtiſans de ce tems-cy. Quant auz fautes de l'Impreſſion, l'Autheur ne les peut totalement prendre ſur ſoy, ne niant pas qu'il n'en ſoit eſchapé aſſez, comme auſſi poſſible en quelques endroits, quelque impropre interpretation; eſperant bien toutefois, que les vnes ny les autres ne ſeront pas ſi grandes que ta courtoiſie n'y puiſſe bien ſuppleer. A tant, Il recomande ſon œuvre à ta bonne reception, & moy je demeure, en ſuppleer.
